Text by Jessica Boubetra

It was a long journey back to the spaceship and Jiri almost didn't notice there were Calapadoos riding beside the main window of the docking module. The air in the room felt like smooth yogurt on his cheek and reaching the control room was similar to scaling a mountain. But the order was strict and not negotiable. The total population of Marina-X Land was around 3,274 humans, almost 38 different species with a total of 5897 entities. This was one of the most accounted for ships in the known universe. Each sector was designed for each related species and their natural environment.
